Frederick H. Lowy
Rector & Vice-Chancellor

As the newly appointed Rector and Vice-Chancellor, it is my privilege to welcome you to the Concordia University community.

A university education provides more than knowledge and skills in the discipline of your choice. Along with the formal classes, seminars and laboratories, the university experience includes the informal intellectual, social, athletic and cultural encounters that will deepen and enrich your understanding of yourself and what you wish to contribute to society. Intercollegiate sports are an important part of the Concordia experience. Our teams are competitive and continue to be a source of pride to the entire University community.

Enjoy the games and join me in encouraging the Stingers during the upcoming season.

Harry Zarins
Director of Recreation and Athletics

On behalf of the Department of Recreation and Athletics, I would like to welcome you to one of the great traditions of Concordia University. Welcome to the 1995-'96 intercollegiate sports season.

Over the years, many outstanding young men and women have dedicated themselves to the university both in the classroom and on the playing fields. This year, a new generation of student-athletes steps forward, and with them comes two long-established goals: work hard and aim high. These efforts are symbolic of the Stinger spirit and give us all reason to be proud. I ask you to join me in supporting and encouraging all Concordia's dedicated athletes, coaches and support staff.

Also, I would like to thank all the people whose support helps keep the Stingers on the leading edge of Canadian university varsity sports. Our student-athletes would not be able to reach such a high level of competition without the support of family, friends, fans, alumni and sponsors.

Let's all enjoy the new season. We hope to see you often.

WELCOME TO CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY

With approximately 25,000 students (of which 13,644 study full-time), 3,200 faculty and staff members, and more than 80,000 alumni worldwide, Concordia University is one of Canada's largest and most dynamic institutions of higher learning.

Students can choose from 160 undergraduate and graduate programs in four faculties: commerce and administration, fine arts, engineering and computer science, and arts and science. Also, integrated within the faculties are seven colleges and more than a dozen research centres.

The university has two campuses: Sir George Williams, which has approximately 42 buildings spread over 13 blocks of downtown Montreal; and Loyola, which sits seven kilometres away on 46 acres in west-end Montreal. The latter has 37 buildings.

From its founding institutions – Loyola College (1896) and Sir George Williams University (1873) – Concordia has inherited a tradition of superior teaching supported by the best possible scholarship, creative activity, research and service to society.

Although the majority of its students are recent CEGEP graduates, Concordia maintains an openness to part-time studies, flexible class schedules and an interdisciplinary approach to learning for men and women of all ages and backgrounds.

As an English-language institution in predominantly French-speaking Quebec, Concordia strives to be responsive to Montreal's bilingual and multicultural character. Approximately 14 per cent of the students list French as their mother tongue, 69 per cent list English and 17 per cent represent other language groups. Term papers and examinations may be submitted in either English or French.

Ever responsive to its members and the surrounding communities, Concordia University offers a wide range of community services from business and professional seminars to cultural and recreational activities. For example, many of the university library services are available to the public, attendance at Concordia's concerts, film screenings, drama productions, lectures, art exhibitions and sports events numbers in the hundreds of thousands annually, and Concordia's faculty and students provide research and consulting services to corporations, small businesses and individuals.

For general information on Concordia University call the public relations department at 848-4880. For details on admissions call 848-2668.

STINGER MONTREUIL HITS BIG TIME WITH NFL CHARGERS

The most frequently asked question around the Concordia Athletic Complex these days is, "Has anybody heard anything about Mark Montreuil and the San Diego Chargers?"

The answer almost always begins with a "yes", but that's where the predictability ends. One day people are talking about how Montreuil, who was a cornerback with the Stingers football team last year, lined up against wide receiver Jerry Rice of the San Francisco 49ers in a pre-season game. The next day people are talking about the BMW Montreuil is considering buying with the bonus money he received for signing a two-year contract with the defending American Football Conference champion Chargers. Then everyone is asking about the full-page, color feature on Montreuil and his NFL exploits in The Montreal Gazette or the article written about him in Pro Football Weekly.

Seeing Montreuil make the Chargers' final roster and earn a spot backing up veteran Dwayne Harper on the left-side corner is both exciting and gratifying for the members of the Stinger football team and just about everyone associated with the university.

"I think he's a conversation piece on a daily basis," said Concordia head coach Pat Sheahan. "Not a day goes by without someone coming up to me and asking how Mark is doing, how is he different from the other players I've coached or what he's like as a person. Others just have comments on his success."

While several athletes have gone on to great careers in the CFL, there has never been a Concordia Stinger in the NFL. In fact, only a handful of Canadian universities have put players in the NFL, and it had been about 10 years since an Ontario-Quebec Intercollegiate Football Conference player was drafted, as Montreuil was in the seventh round, 237th overall, last April 23rd.

"I think our football program has gained a certain amount of prestige," Sheahan said. "We have cause for celebration because one of our own has gone on to do so well."

In 1992, Montreuil came to Concordia as a wide receiver, the same position he played all through his midget, junior and CEGEP years. He found the transition to receiving at the university level hard. When he came back in 1993 he asked to be moved to the defensive backfield, where he played cornerback for the last two years.

"I liked the idea of being part of a unit on defence," Montreuil said. "When you're receiving you are out there alone, but defence is more team work. I never felt that I was alone."

Obviously, Montreuil excelled on the corner. But what really helped his career was his devotion to training. He holds the record for the highest score in physical testing in the history of Concordia varsity sports. In August of 1994, he collected 1045 points, which is right off the scale. Anything more than 1000 points is considered super human. Anything in the 900 range is considered excellent. He recorded a time of 4.29 in the 40-yard dash and his vertical leap was 38 inches, both of which helped push up his scores.

"I believe you gain mental toughness from training," Montreuil said. "It definitely helps me on the field."

Although coach Sheahan says the Chargers have taught Montreuil most of what he needs to play in the NFL, he does take credit for helping the cornerback in other areas.

"The effort, the striving, the pursuit of excellence, all those were developed within the confines of the Concordia football program," Sheahan said. "It's things like commitment, dedication, work ethic and perseverance that Mark learned with the Stingers."

Just about every time Montreuil's name is called out by the announcers on ESPN, TNT or ABC's Monday Night Football, Concordia University is mentioned and that's bound to help coach Sheahan.

"Mark has created a tremendous amount of interest in our program," he said. "It's a very sellable point."

And Sheahan thinks the best is yet to come.

"Mark's arrival in the NFL has made the dream very real for those who follow," he said. "I don't think we're going to send 10 players to the NFL every year, but I do believe Mark won't be the last Stinger to go to the NFL."

As 'Montreal'

as the Kid, the Flower, and the Rocket

When it comes to sports, Montrealers are a breed apart. From dynasties on ice to celebrations on the soccer field, Montreal fans are famous for their passion, their penchant for nicknames – and their pride.

They're also famous for their knowledge of the game. Whether it's the batting average of a right-fielder or the latest rumors of an impending trade, Montrealers know the score every day with the help of The Gazette.

Seven days a week, superstar columnists like Jack Todd, Red Fisher and Pat Hickey cover all the bases in a sports section that's as 'Montreal' as the city that invented basketball.

CAMMI GRANATO - A GREAT AMBASSADOR FOR WOMEN'S HOCKEY

BY JUSTIN KINGSLEY

It's Monday morning and women's hockey coach Les Lawton has two problems to deal with that other members of his profession would likely pay for.

Cammi Granato is wearing fashions supplied by Dalton

Problem one: during the season's inaugural team meeting for the Concordia Stingers women's hockey team held minutes ago, a fight broke out between the veterans and the rookies - an amicable egg-throwing fight - less a battle, more a mess. The yokes on Lawton though, because he'll probably get stuck cleaning up.

Problem two: No longer walking on eggshells, Lawton has an enigma to solve - what can he say about Stinger star centre Cammi Granato that hasn't already been published?

"That's a tough question," Lawton shoots back.

Fans already know that Granato is one of the world's top five women hockey players. They know about the time Gretzky sent her on a breakaway during a charity game and she was so excited she can't remember whether she scored a goal. They know about her NHL brother Tony, as well as Don and Rob, other Granato alma maters from the Wisconsin University Badger hockey program.

So what's left?

"Number one," Lawton said, "is her work ethic and respect for other players. She never puts herself ahead of the team."

Granato is not your usual hockey star. She is one of the foremost players in the world, yet she ends conversations with "nice talking to you" and doesn't shun fans and the like who want some of her personal time. In other words, she has a polite manner and enjoys donating her spare time to promote the game she fell in love with as a child in Downer's Grove, Ill. Is she a sports star in the '90s or a descendant of Hobey Baker's?

"Nothing's been given to Cammi Granato," Lawton said. "She's had to work for everything she has. Although she doesn't have to, she's always willing to give up her time."

Granato is starting her last year at Concordia and heading toward a graduate diploma in sports administration.

School started on Sept. 6, but Granato spent the weekend in a Los Angeles suburb, playing in a three-on-three roller hockey tournament with Manon Rheume, the professional goaltender who labors in the Tampa Bay Lightning farm system. The duo form one of the most formidable marketing strategies for women's hockey and, as Lawton said, "are the greatest ambassadors of women's hockey."

Since joining Concordia in January 1994, Granato has led the Stingers in scoring. In 1994-'95 her totals were 35 goals and 28 assists for 63 points in 33 games. And last season, she was named team MVP and Concordia's Female Athlete of the Year.

On the ice she's been called poison inside the other team's blueline and scores from all angles. She has a powerful stride and shifts directions with ease. Then again, she probably learned how to skate before she could walk.

"I don't know what (life) would be like without hockey," Granato said. "I'm very focused on hockey. It was always around when I was growing up."

Now that her university career is nearing its end (she also played at Providence College on scholarship before coming to Montreal), Granato will likely spend most of her time after the season with the U.S. national team, with which she travelled to Finland this summer and won a silver medal at the last world championships in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Granato says she'd like to get into promotions and public relations and is considering a career in broadcasting. She also hasn't ruled out the possibility of playing professionally if a league should be created. There's a long way to go, though, before that happens.

"I wish people would give it (women's hockey) a chance," Granato said. "If people could see it as a different game (compared to the NHL), then maybe they'd accept it."

If they come out to see her and the Stingers play, they'll definitely see a sport other than NHL-style play, if you can call it that. They'll see one of the world's best players on one of the world's best teams playing one of the world's greatest games: Reel hockey - the stuff you put on reel so that generations to come can see how hockey was meant to be played.

LEIGH-JASON QUILLIAMS - GETTING DOWN WITH THE SKI TEAM

BY JUSTIN KINGSLEY

For Leigh Jason Quilliams, life has been a downhill battle.

And that's exactly the way this member of Concordia's competitive ski team wants it to be – especially since he's been going down faster than most.

At 21 years old and only in his second year at Concordia University, Quilliams is the reigning Quebec Student Sport Federation (QSSF) overall downhill champion.

Quilliams and his Stinger teammates had a strong finish to the 1995 season. Joining him on the medal podium last March was Martin Laperrière, also a rookie, who finished second. Their efforts helped the Stingers men's team finish in fifth place on the 10-team university ski circuit.

The women were led by newcomer Fiona Wilde and veteran

Cassandra Price. Wilde finished third at the championships, helping the Concordia women's team to a seventh-place finish.

Now, Quilliams has set his sights on improving last year's performance.

"I'm looking to defend my title and increase my GPA," Quilliams said.

Just like a Crazy Canuck, to throw Grade-Point Average into a sports story. Surprising, some may think, because Quilliams not only ranked first in the QSSF after his first season on the circuit, but he also spent time winning the cross-country championship in the Quebec Cup Expert Mountain Biking Circuit (he turns pro next season) while completing the first year of a degree in physics.

"I like the sports where I can win medals," Quilliams said, "not ping-pong."

Although he won't get to actually climb the podium when he receives his degree, Quilliams has made academics a priority in life as well. He wears the student-athlete label well, and it shows in the way he reaches toward the goals he set.

"He's very calculating," the ski team's head coach, Stephane Rivard said. "He figures everything out and doesn't waste any energy. He analyses every run."

"The way it works in skiing is that you either study or you race (competitively). Some of them, like Leigh Jason, decide to go to school."

In a sport in which about 40 per cent of slalom participants don't finish a race because they veer off-course, Quilliams is an exception in his approach.

"He doesn't go out there and ski on the edge," Rivard explained. "He's very trained, focused. It's a very good quality to have."

Skiing has been a priority in Quilliams's life for many years, but when he made the decision to attend university, he also chose, reluctantly, to all but give up any hopes to be in the national ski program.

Most of the 300 QSSF skiers find themselves in the same situation; it's a fact of life in this sport in Quebec and it probably helps avoid the sport-casualties that often occur when young athletes have dreams of stardom but end-up making sacrifices (like neglecting school) that hurt them in the future.

The program at Concordia, although geared to win, promotes other ideals as well.

The team receives little financial support from the university and takes care of administrative duties itself. Athletes and others involved with the team raise funds thanks to the annual ski sale, which takes place Nov. 15 to 19 and raises enough money to pay for some of the expenses. The students end up spending some of their own money as well, but it's a fact they've grown accustomed to.

There's a communal feeling in the club and many of the skiers end up becoming good friends, despite the fact that for 10 races every year they're competing against each other.

"It's a great place to meet people and make friends," Quilliams said.

It's also a great team to try for, if you're the get-down type.

SKIING PROSPECTUS

Head coach: Stephane Rivard (6th season)

Assistant coaches: TBA

Key veterans: Leigh Jason Quilliams, Fiona Wilde

Newcomers: France Viens

Strengths: Leadership from Quilliams and Wilde

Weaknesses: Young, inexperienced team

Record in 1994-'95: Men's team finished fifth, women's team finished seventh. Quilliams won gold medal, Laperrière won silver medal, Wilde won bronze medal. All three represented Canada at World University Games in Spain last February.

VOLLEYBALL EXCHANGE - JAPANESE TEAM TO VISIT STINGERS

The biggest event in the seven-year history of the Concordia University women's volleyball program will take place this fall when the Stingers play host to a university team from Japan.

From Oct. 31 to Nov. 5, players, coaches and delegates from Tokyo Gakugei University will join forces with the Stingers. They will work out together, play two exhibition matches and take part in some typical exchange activities like sightseeing and shopping.

The driving force behind this unique event is Stingers head coach Melanie Sanford.

"I want the members of our team, coaching staff and members of the public to experience the passion and loyalty that Japanese players and coaches have toward the game of volleyball," Sanford said of her motivation for organizing such a huge undertaking.

The Japanese are considered among the world's volleyball elite. Their approach to the game and training methods will be something to behold for the members of the Concordia Stingers.

"They are relentless in their pursuit of volleyball," Sanford said. "They are relentless on the court. No ball will hit the floor without maximum effort every time. They don't put limits on what they do."

"From my experience, that attitude toward the game takes it to another level."

Sanford, who played for the national team from 1977 to 1982, has first-hand knowledge of the Japanese approach to volleyball. As a setter on the Canadian team she played against them several times.

"They beat us," Sanford said. "They are always very strong. They are always ranked in the top 10 in the world. Canada's in the top 15, but there's a big difference."

Sanford decided she wanted to know more of the Japanese approach to the game.

"I went over to Japan after I finished with the national team," she said. "I went to experience volleyball in a different way. I wanted to expand my experience. I wanted to become a better player and I did. My awareness for the game really changed after my time there."

First, Sanford paid an "informal visit" to Japan. She spent two months learning about volleyball - with professional teams like Fuji Film, Hitachi and NEC - and the Japanese culture.

"In August of 1982 I went back for eight months," she said. "I was invited to play for NEC, which is a professional volleyball team in Japan."

Since she got so much out of her Japanese experience, Sanford couldn't pass up the opportunity to set up a similar, although much briefier, opportunity for the members of the Stingers.

"I was very excited when I first entertained the idea because I wanted to create something that would be unique for my team, draw attention to our program and help with professional development," Sanford said.

"Our players are really looking forward to this and have been eager to participate in every aspect of the exchange."

All the Stingers are counting the days to Oct. 31 when the Japanese delegation arrives. They even have a Japanese-English tape, which they hope will help them communicate with their visitors.

"For them to come here and experience our culture is great," said fifth-year veteran Cassandra Bardo. "I'm sure we're just as excited as they are. We're thrilled to have them with us."

KEITH PRUDEN - LAYING DOWN THE FOUNDATIONS FOR GREATNESS

From the time he was an infant in 1967 and the family hosted a barbecue with the Argentinean basketball team in attendance right through to the present, Concordia women's head coach Keith Pruden's association with basketball has been well-documented.

There are pictures from the summer of '67 with baby Keith and the seven-foot athletes, who were in Winnipeg for the Pan-American Games, and more recently there has been North American-wide press recording the accomplishments of the University of Winnipeg Wesmen and their run at a North American college record for consecutive wins. Pruden, 28, was an assistant coach with the Wesmen women's basketball team from 1989 to the spring of 1995. The team tied the college record with 88 consecutive wins in the fall of 1994. The UCLA men's basketball team set the record in the early '70s.

There have been countless other involvements and successes over the years leading up to Pruden taking over the women's basketball program at Concordia University last July, all of which are part of his rich basketball background. When you get an early start and have a great role model like Vic Pruden, basketball and success are bound to be part of your history.

"Basketball was an integral part of my father's life, so basketball has been an integral part of my life from day one. It was unavoidable," Pruden explained of growing up with Vic Pruden who coached basketball at the university and national levels.

"Most of my childhood memories are associated with basketball. From the time I was five or six years old, I remember going to his practices and on road trips. It was lots of fun being a little kid around a sports team and getting to travel to great places like Brandon."

With a basketball-saturated upbringing, you'd think Pruden would race head-long into coaching, but he ended up on the bench as more of a fluke than anything else.

"I was in Grade 10 and part of my high school program included community work," he said. "I couldn't think of anything to do, so I decided to coach basketball. I coached junior high school kids who were just a couple of years younger than me.

"That's when I discovered I loved basketball. I stayed involved and kept moving up."

There are two aspects of the game that keep Pruden's devotion for basketball at such a high level.

"I love competition," he admitted, "and I love seeing that expression on a player's face when she gets something, when it clicks. I love teaching."

Pruden actually considered becoming a history professor or a writer and was attracted to international politics for a while, "but basketball is fun," he said. "I won't give up basketball until it stops being fun."

After six years of being an assistant, Pruden now has all the fun of running his own university program.

"Concordia has a lot of potential," he said. "I get the sense from everyone around here that they have big time aspirations for the women's basketball team, which is great. I want my team to be the best women's basketball program in the country. I want Concordia to be the place where everyone wishes they could come and play."

The first step in that direction involves attitude.

"I've got to convince the players that they are part of the best team in the country," Pruden said. "There's a lot of untapped potential on this team. I have to convince them that there's no limit to how good they can become. The rest is just details."

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL PROSPECTUS

Head coach: Keith Pruden (1st season)

Assistant coaches: Robert Ferguson

Key veterans: Isabelle Bernier, Patricia Demers

Newcomers: Joanne Fasone, Monica Nolet

Strengths: Nine returnees from last year's team, good depth and athletic ability.

Weaknesses: Relative inexperience on the perimeter

NEW BEGINNINGS FOR STINGER SOCCER TEAMS

BY JUSTIN KINGSLEY

Men's soccer coach Vladimir Pavlicik had only one instruction for goalkeeper Ron Eliakim in training camp this season: "I told him not to get injured," Pavlicik said. "It's not an option."

With the men's varsity soccer team coming off one of its worst seasons in history – it was the first time that Concordia didn't qualify for the play-offs – Pavlicik has reason to bark seemingly preposterous orders at players such as Eliakim. (Pavlicik was on sabbatical last season.)

The 20-year-old keeper is one of only three veterans from last year's eleven to make the team this season (the others were cut or didn't try out), and the only returning starter, other than Eliakim, is team captain Tony D'Addario.

And there's more.

Eliakim can't afford to be injured because he's the only keeper. The last man back on defence is the only man on the team without a backup.

But if Eliakim can maintain his good health – he says he's seldom missed action due to injuries – Pavlicik believes the Stingers will do well in the Quebec Student Sport Federation (QSSF) league. As a matter of fact, he guarantees the team will make the playoffs this year.

"We don't have the Grant Needhams or the Mauro Biellos (former Stingers now with the Montreal Impact in the professional ranks)," Pavlicik said, "but we have a good crop of above-average college players."

"In soccer, people often overestimate the value of a single player," he added, "and underestimate the value of a team."

Anyone looking to figure out the Concordia strategy has to look no further than Pavlicik's own word: Team.

The Stingers aren't practising English long-ball style or the Italian build-up and score-the-perfect-goal schemes. When the ball is in the defensive end every player but the striker, the lone true forward, comes back to support.

On offence, armed with the knowledge that Eliakim is there to save the day, defenders can push up and look to score.

"It's up to the team to create a scoring opportunity," Pavlicik said, "and it's up to the players to convert. That means our players can force a play," he added, "and (Eliakim) is back there, solid."

Said Eliakim, "I like them (defenders) to know they can have confidence in me. I like being on the edge."

Eliakim is adding to the tradition of solid goalkeeping at Concordia. It started with George Bselis in the '70s, then came Alex Polidoro and Genaro Angelilo.

According to Pavlicik, Eliakim is the backbone of the Stingers now, in only his second season.

"If the ball goes up in the air, I know he'll get it," Pavlicik said. "His advantage is that he has good spatial orientation. He has excellent depth perception."

"I play for the guys in front of me," Eliakim said.

And he rarely allows anybody or anything behind.

Sylvia Franz, head coach of the Concordia women's soccer team, finds herself starting in a similar situation to Pavlicik. Most of her veterans have moved on and a new, young crop of players have stepped up to take their places.

"I'm happy," Franz said. "There's a lot to work with."

Out of the 20 women with the team, there are only two returning players, Meagan McCaffrey and Megan Roberts.

One of the rookies Franz and assistant coach Philippe Ciarlo are looking forward to working with is 21-year-old goalkeeper Christine Richlich.

"If she's willing to work hard, she'll do a very good job," Franz said.

Keep an eye on Tania Morsani, a graduate of the John Abbott College and Lakeshore soccer programs, and Michelle Johansson, who is also an elite hockey player at Concordia. Both have earned high praise from Franz.

The Stingers will be very different from the 1994 squad which finished in fourth place and was eliminated in the semifinals.

"This team is technically weaker," Franz said. "But overall they have a lot more potential to develop. The players are young. They have lots to learn and the capacity to learn it."

Watch for a strong second half from the Stingers as Franz's teaching starts to pay dividends.

YOUR ALUMNI ASSOCIATION - WORKING FOR YOU:

Talk is cheap

The CUAA Mentor Programme is tailored to help students formulate career goals. Students will be matched with alumni working in the student's field of interest. Through personal meetings with volunteer Mentors, students will obtain a realistic view of the field which they are contemplating entering.

Join today because TALK IS CHEAP, but advice from a professional is invaluable when you need career information. 848-3825.

Career Fair

"Careers in the Real World" is organized in conjunction with CAST (Concordia Alumni Student Team - composed of representatives from all student associations), CAPS (Career and Placement Services) and the Careers Library. This day-long event brings industry leaders to the University for the purpose of giving "real-world" information to students. Look for details of "Careers in the Real World" to be held once in the fall and once in the winter, and get your questions answered by people-in-the-know. 848-3825.

Grad Finale

As a brand-new graduate, you are invited to celebrate with your family and friends at this Convocation Party co-sponsored by the CUAA and the Office of the Rector. Now a firmly entrenched tradition, this reception is held in June to congratulate all new graduates and welcome them into the greater Concordia University alumni family. Look for details in your graduation package! 848-3815.

CONCORDIA COACHES

HEAD COACH – KEITH PRUDEN FIRST SEASON

Keith Pruden comes to the Stingers from the University of Winnipeg, where he was an assistant coach with the Wesmen from 1989-'95. While with the Wesmen, he won three consecutive CIAU championships ('93, '94, '95). Pruden has also enjoyed many successes with the Manitoba provincial program. He was head coach of the junior women's basketball team in '94 and '95. He was the juvenile women's team head coach in '93. That year he was also named the Manitoba Basketball Coaches Association Coach of the Year.

ASSISTANT COACH – ROBERT FERGUSON SECOND SEASON

Robert Ferguson joined the women's team as an assistant coach after a distinguished five-year career with the Concordia men's team. He brings with him the same qualities that made him an exceptional All-Canadian guard – intelligence, commitment and intensity. His coaching responsibilities include scouting and player development. Coach Pruden credits him with helping the team adapt quickly to a new head coach and new approach to the game.

GUYLAINE BLANCHETTE TAKES THE HIGH ROAD

It seemed as if Guylaine Blanchette could do no wrong. Every time she wrapped up a basketball campaign there seemed to be a gold medal, whether it was with College Ahuntsic or the Quebec team.

So when Manhattan College – a Division I school in the Bronx – came calling, the talented post had no reason to believe it would be any different.

"I thought about it a lot," Blanchette, a Montreal native, said. "I decided I had to go and experience it. I felt I had nothing to lose. If I didn't like it, I would just come back."

At Manhattan, some things went well and others did not.

"I didn't like the attitude of the people on the team," Blanchette said. "They were very selfish and jealous."

"I don't regret the experience, but one year was enough."

Once she decided to return to Canada, she was sure Concordia was where she belonged.

"I knew the university well," she said. "I knew all the players and I knew if I came here everything would go well."

She practised with the Stingers in the first part of 1995 and then began playing in games in October. Under the guidance of head coach Keith Pruden, she and post Patricia Demers have been dominant at both ends of the court. For Blanchette it's obvious there's no place like home.

One of the reasons she is enjoying success again is the connection she feels with Pruden, whose help she is counting on to reach some lofty goals.

"I'm happy that coach Pruden is here," she said. "He's very technical and he believes in developing players. He's given me a positive attitude and he makes you believe you can do anything."

"My goal is to make the Canadian team. I really have confidence in the coach that he will give me the assets I need."

As for Pruden, he looks forward to reinforcing Blanchette's positive view of both Concordia and Canadian university basketball.

"Guylaine is certainly a good enough athlete to play at a Division I school (in the United States) and we're lucky to have her," he said. "She gives us a lot more depth and scoring off the bench. She can play a lot of positions. She can play the post and play the perimeter."

Pruden is sure the Concordia Stingers can offer Blanchette as much skill development as Manhattan or any number of Division I schools.

"What people don't realize is Division I is not a guarantee of high quality basketball," he said. "There's no guarantee that you will be a part of a winning program or that a program will meet your needs as an athlete."

"The best CIAU schools are competitive with the top Division I schools."

Pruden thinks there's great things ahead for his young post.

"I expect that she can become one of the top players in the country," he said. "She has the athletic ability and the desire. When you combine those two things you get an athlete with unlimited potential."

Post Guylaine Blanchette is gunning for the gold once again.

With the his team, one area Pruden has put a lot of emphasis on is attitude. And Blanchette, a psychology student, appreciates it.

"We have to put a winning attitude in everyone's head," she said. "What I feel I've learned the most from him is the mental game."

While the Stingers are not yet well known for their mental toughness, it's coming along, and Pruden sees some encouraging signs in Blanchette.

"She's always positive, always enthusiastic and she works very hard. She helps keep everyone loose and positive."

Since the pieces are coming together nicely for the Stingers and Blanchette, she figures it won't be long until she's back in gold medal territory.

"I always win championships and I'm going to win again," she said.

THE STINGERS: WORKING THEIR WAY TO THE TOP

The women's basketball program at Concordia University has had its moments, but it has never enjoyed the exalted status of some of the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union's top teams.

Last June, head coach Keith Pruden was brought in and his mission is very clear: Make Concordia one of the best women's basketball programs in the country.

"The University of Winnipeg, Laurentian, Victoria, they are looked upon as the best programs," explained Pruden, who was an assistant at Winnipeg from 1989-'95. "They are always competitive, they are always ranked in the top 10 and they go to the national championship more often than they don't. I think the three of them have been to the nationals at least 16 times each.

"I want people to associate Concordia with great basketball," he added. "I want people to think that on any given day we can beat any team in the country. It's a big deal to play Laurentian, Victoria or Winnipeg. I want it to be a big deal to play us. I want people to know that they are going to have to prepare very hard and play very well to beat us."

This aggressive approach to developing Stinger basketball has been met with great enthusiasm from the players.

"Coach Pruden set very clear and defined objectives right from the beginning," said Patricia

Demers, a fourth-year post and team captain. "This is a program where you work hard, you work for your victories and you feel good about it."

"He's a perfectionist and that's good," added Isabelle Bernier, who is also a captain and a post.

One of Pruden's first moves was to equip his team with the best of everything. There were new uniforms, warmups, T-shirts, shoes. The players began to feel appreciated.

"We feel there are people behind us, supporting us," Bernier said. "We got some new things, but it's also Anna (an academic counsellor to the varsity athletes), therapy, the weight training programs and the coaches."

Equipping the team is the easy part, developing skills and a winning attitude takes some work, but everyone looks forward to the challenges. Demers, for instance, enjoys working on adding new dimensions to her game.

"Since high school, coaches have told me I was weak defensively," she explained. "I was always given the weakest player to defend and told to concentrate on scoring from in close to the basket and rebounding. But not now. I get to drive, take the three-pointer and play the wing. Coach Pruden is helping me develop all aspects of my game and not just on the court. I'm also learning confidence, respect, consistency, leadership. It makes me so much more of a threat."

Coach Keith Pruden discusses strategy with the Stingers.

As each player develops her self-confidence and basketball skills, the Stingers become more and more of a threat. Pruden, of course, is the driving force behind this transformation.

"The coach puts so much energy into basketball," Bernier said. "We have no choice but to follow. He's so positive, he loves basketball and he knows how to win."

And very soon the Concordia Stingers will know how to win too.

Post Patricia Demers in action.

CONCORDIA COACHES

HEAD COACH – JOHN DORE SEVENTH SEASON

In his first six seasons as head coach of the Concordia Stingers, John Dore has made six trips to the CIAU nationals. He won the university championship in 1990 and had his second best showing last season. The Stingers finished No. 2 in the nation last March. In addition to having a reputation for winning, Dore is known for his ability to develop young athletes. An impressive number of All-Canadians have emerged under his tutelage in the last six years. To that end, Dore also works with the Canadian national team. Last year, he coached Canada's entry at the World University Games in Japan. Dore's many successes were recognized in the fall of 1995 when he was named Quebec University Coach of the Year by the Foundation for Quebec University Athletics.

ASSISTANT COACH HARVEY LIVERMAN - 11TH SEASON

Since 1968 when Harvey Liverman first stepped on the court in a Loyola Warriors uniform, he has been a strong contributor to the university's men's basketball program. His experience, dedication and passion as a player and coach have helped Concordia develop into one of the strongest programs in Canada.

MARK BAYNE MANAGER

NO LIMITS FOR CENTRE FRED ARSENAULT

By Justin Kingsley

After five years at Concordia University with head coach John Dore and the Stingers basketball team, centre Fred Arsenault will leave this spring a completely changed man.

Arsenault came to Montreal from Mascouche, Que., in 1991. When he arrived at Concordia, he was a unilingual francophone, who had little confidence in his abilities. And it didn't help that despite measuring in at 6-foot-9, he weighed a measly 180 pounds.

Few schools recruited Arsenault. As a prospect, he didn't seem very promising or intimidating. He was a soft-spoken big man who never liked to make too much noise.

"I'm reserved," he said, "a little silent. I'm careful to always be in my place."

There were many obstacles standing between Arsenault and success at the university level, but Dore saw something in him the first time he saw him play in a game. Arsenault intercepted a pass, dribbled the length of the court and dunked.

"I think those were his only two points of the game," Dore said, "but I saw the athletic ability."

Five years later, Arsenault is a senior with the Stingers, he is about 20 pounds heavier and he plays with confidence. In fact, his game has improved to the point where he can compete with the best university players in Canada.

Dore, who has a reputation for developing young talent, has done a lot of work with Arsenault and has found it very rewarding.

"We've been on top of him since he got here," Dore said. "The biggest enjoyment I got out of it was to see Fred grow."

Arsenault tried out for Canada's entry at the World University Games last summer and he earned a spot on the team. In addition to earning a trip to the Games, which were held in Fukuoka, Japan, last September, he is now a carded athlete with the Canadian national basketball program.

His experience with the national program made a big impression on Arsenault. He came home with a bronze medal, but more than that, he experienced a whole different way of life.

"The first thing you see there is a clean city," said Arsenault of Fukuoka. "And the bikes aren't locked. People seem to trust each other," he added, "it's almost frightening."

The time spent with the national program is expected to help Arsenault progress even more. And with coach Dore, there's always more to learn.

"He's always risen to the occasion," the coach said, "but this year we're looking for a little more consistency."

Arsenault knows he has to have his best year yet if the Stingers want to take another serious run at the national championship and he says he's looking forward to the task.

"Our No. 1 goal this season has to be to win the nationals," he said. "It's my first priority."

Fred Arsenault represented Canada at the University Games.

Arsenault also said he's vying for a league all-star and MVP season, as well as a shot at being All-Canadian. His confidence, it seems, is no longer a problem.

"I get more excited by a challenge," Arsenault said, "but I'm working on staying up for all the games."

No matter how this season plays out, Arsenault has a university career to be proud of and a bright future ahead of him.

Also, when he leaves Concordia he'll be bilingual and have earned a Bachelor of Arts with a major in economics.

"I couldn't speak a word of English when I got here," Arsenault said, "but I've learned how to manage for myself. Concordia definitely was the right choice."

His ability to master languages may come in handy since many people think he has a chance to play professional basketball in Europe.

And why not? A little German or Italian would go well with his mastery of his native French and now English.

JUSTIN PADVAISKAS SHOOTS FOR THE TOP

By Justin Kingsley

The minute you see Justin Padvaiskas on the basketball court, you know he's the point guard.

He's the quiet leader, the guy who gets the ball in the scorer's hands and controls the flow of the game.

He's slick and under control when he's handling the ball, he likes the bounce pass and he's not very tall for a basketball player, just six feet.

He usually shoots only if he's open and will, on occasion, drive for a layup and take the defence by surprise.

"He is the best point guard in the country this year," Stingers head coach John Dore said, "if he wants to be."

Padvaiskas, true to his quiet, humble personality, could only come up with three little words when told of coach Dore's appraisal. "Pretty high praise," he admitted.

He has the temperament of a goldfish, but the key is that he plays with the efficacy of a piranha. Check out who has fouled out most on the team at any point in the season and chances are it will be the point guard.

Padvaiskas was born in Montreal but moved to Vancouver before his first birthday. He played three years at Douglas College in British Columbia and came to the Stingers last season with only two years of eligibility left.

This season will be his last with Concordia, but he established himself as the starting point guard when he first walked through the gym doors at Concordia.

"I wanted a chance to go to a good school and be on a good team," Padvaiskas said. "(At Concordia) you have a chance to go to the national finals every year. You don't get that everywhere. This is the best choice I could've made."

Stinger guard Justin Padvaiskas charges down the court.

GAETAN PROSPER MAKES THE GRADE AT CONCORDIA

As a university basketball player, there are all kinds of statistics by which to measure success. Few, however, put enough of their energies into pursuing the most important numbers of all – those three little digits at the bottom of a university transcript.

Gaetan Prosper, a guard-forward with the Concordia Stingers varsity basketball team knows which numbers count when all is said and done.

"The most important thing is to do well in school," he said, "because sports could end anytime."

"I don't always succeed but I always do my best," he added. "They say nothing is forever, but education is forever. No one can take that from you."

His grade point average in the last academic year was a 3.41 out of 4.3. That means the fourth-year economics student maintained an average of 80 per cent. The Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union recognizes student-athletes who excel in the classroom. Prosper was awarded an Academic All-Canadian certificate. It's a great achievement and honor, but not one that Prosper boasts about.

"I don't really tell people about it," he said. "It's not something I brag about. I did it for myself."

Prosper is also a little on the humble side.

"There's no secret to my grades," he explained. "I liked my classes and every year I increased my learning skills. I learned how to focus my attention."

He does admit, however, that juggling a demanding basketball schedule and being committed to excellence in the classroom takes perseverance.

"It's like taking two extra classes," he said. "It's tough."

Prosper, a native of Haiti who has been in Montreal for about 10 years now, should finish his degree in economics this winter. He plans to return for a fifth season and to complete a minor in computer science.

Don't stereotype Prosper as a nerdy bookworm or a bench-warmer just because he is an exceptional student. The team captain was a Quebec Student Sports Federation first team all-star last season. In his spare time, he likes to listen to music and put together tapes for the Stingers' high-energy pregame warmup.

J. P. REIMER - REACHING NEW HEIGHTS WITH THE STINGERS

When basketball star J. P. Reimer first enrolled at Concordia University in 1992, he was known as Bill Reimer's kid. Since professor Reimer has been teaching sociology at Concordia since 1972 and J. P.'s been literally hanging around his office for 23 years, it's easy to understand why people think of him as "Bill's kid."

J.P. Reimer is wearing fashions supplied by Dalton

"I've been around Concordia a long time," said J.P. "When I was pretty young - before I was walking - my father would bring me to work. He'd pull out a drawer in his file cabinet, put down a blanket and that's where I would sleep.

"He wouldn't close the drawer though," added J.P.

How things have changed in the last 22 or 23 years. For one thing, at six-foot-six and 225 pounds, J.P. has outgrown the file cabinet. And J.P. is not really known as "Bill's kid" anymore.

"Now my dad is known as 'J.P. Reimer's father' instead of the other way around," J.P. said. "That's cool. They've finally got it right."

The university really is home to the entire Reimer clan. Mom, Frances Shaver, is also a sociology professor, and sister Daegan works in the university administration. But last year, his third with the Stingers, J.P. really emerged from out under the family shadow with an exceptional year on the basketball court as a team captain and starting forward.

"J.P., through his leadership, work ethic and attitude, had a most successful season," said Stingers head coach John Dore. "In his four years with us, he's developed as a real leader and we're counting on him again this season."

Just check out this list of accomplishments. As a member of the Stingers, J.P. has won three Quebec Student Sports Federation (QSSF) championships and has been to three national championship Final Eight tournaments. Last March in Halifax, he helped lead the Stingers to a second-place finish at the nationals. Concordia entered the tournament ranked No. 7. He was even named the Most Valuable Player in the Stingers semifinal game versus the Toronto Varsity Blues.

"In the semifinal, that was the most pressure I've ever felt," J.P. admitted. "It was really big for me. But now I want the pressure. It was awesome. I want it again, and this time, I'll be even bettered prepared."

J.P. was named to the all-star team at the nationals. He was also a second-team QSSF all-star and named to the elite squads at two tournaments - in Ottawa and at the Golden Ball Tournament in New Brunswick.

In addition, J.P. received some honors from the Concordia community. He was given a C Award for three years of dedication to his team and a Merit Award, which is presented to Stingers who combine their athletic prowess with leadership and sportsmanship, at the Concordia Department of Recreation and Athletics annual banquet last March. He was also honored with a Concordia Council on Student Life Merit Award for contributions to university life last April.

With all his recent success, it might be tempting to get a little arrogant or self-centred, but it's just not in J.P.'s character. He's a well-rounded person, who has had all the advantages that come along with a good home and strong family ties.

"I definitely had a good upbringing," he said. "My parents taught me to respect things like education and not to take things for granted. They also taught me good values."

His upbringing and Concordia experiences have led J.P. to another path. He wants to be a high school teacher. He would like to teach history - that is his major at Concordia - and maybe drama. Right now, J.P. is a volunteer tutor with Youth in Motion in Little Burgundy. He assists inner-city teens with their high school curriculum.

"It's all about the kids," J.P. said. "I'm hoping that maybe I can make a difference, even if it's in just one person's life."

"Kids are awesome. There's so much you can learn from them. Even this year, I picked up two things from them that will help me with basketball. Not to take away from my coaches, it's just two little things that I'll be adding to my game."

Now that J.P. has added a couple of improvements to his game, the upcoming basketball season is bound to be even better for the physical forward. So that means another year of being called "J.P.'s father" for Bill Reimer. Somehow, we don't think he'll mind.

RUGBY - WILL TRADITION HOLD TRUE?

For rugby followers, it used to be easy to predict how the Concordia Stingers women's and men's teams would finish each season.

Even if you weren't an expert in the field, you knew the women's team would steamroll over its competition and it was pretty safe to predict the Stingers would win the Quebec Student Sports Federation (QSSF) championship.

The women have put together a few back-to-back championship seasons. In fact, last season's crown was their fourth straight QSSF title. And heading into this season, they have an amazing 34-game undefeated streak to their credit.

However, even with that impressive history to consider, there's no consensus on how the 1995 Concordia Stingers women's rugby campaign is going to turn out.

What is known is that this is a transitional year for the women's team. Head coach Tom Ingerman and assistant coach Chris Regimbal, who were with the team throughout its championship years, have left the Stingers. Although, you are quite likely to find them cheering on the team from the stands come game day, both now have commitments that make coaching the Stingers impossible.

The new era begins with Jeff Page at the helm of the Concordia women's rugby team. Page, who comes to the Stingers from the Brome Lake Ducks, is very aware of the Stingers' winning tradition.

"There are two different feelings that come to mind," he said. "There's pressure to keep up the record, but I also feel this team will be a lot easier to coach. The people here have been together a long time and know each other well."

There's a core of returning veterans like Dia Hurtubise, Kim Poirier, Lara Falquero and Margaret Thompson, but there's also a lot of rookies.

Page, who has been involved with rugby as a player and a coach since 1989, is optimistic.

"I'd like to see us go far in the playoffs," he said. "We definitely want to peak at the end."

It's too soon to tell, but the women's team may not be rebuilding. Perhaps the Stingers are just reloading.

Most years, it didn't take a crystal ball to figure out what would happen with the men's team. Traditionally, they show a lot of spirit and not much punch, and it would be safe to say the team would finish near the bottom of the pack.

If that was your prediction this season, you could end up with egg on your face. Head coach José Louis Aguirre took over the team in 1994 and in his first year, the Stingers finished in third place, then lost in the QSSF semifinal. It was a good finish for a young team.

Aguirre is back with assistant coach Clive Gibson and a good number of veterans, including Derek Della Rocca, Jason Della Rocca, Ben Page, Paul Van Wick, Alfredo De Martino, Jen Lew and Sam Goldie.

Although Aguirre says a lack of "warriors" has hurt the team, that could change this year with three football players joining the troops this season. Van Malkassian, Frank Lepanto and Andray Wellington, all aggressive players who were linebackers and defensive linemen in their grid careers, are in camp.

So with some stability, the same old spirit and some warrior-types taking an interest in the Stingers, there's no telling how far the 1995 men's rugby team can go.

DIMITRIOS MANOLOPOULOS - GETTING HIS KICKS WITH THE STINGERS

It's an age-old story. A bunch of kids are standing around a football field on the first day of tryouts and the head coach says everyone throw the ball and everyone kick the ball. The boy who throws farthest becomes the quarterback and the kid who kicks the ball nearest to the uprights gets to be the kicker.

That, in a nutshell, is the way Concordia Stingers all-star kicker/punter Dimitrios (Gazoo) Manolopoulos started his football career.

"I was 15 years old and a friend of mine from Rosemount High School convinced me to try football," Manolopoulos, an Anjou native, said of his introduction to the sport and the Sun Youth bantam Hornets. "I went just so I could be with my buddy.

"I remember the head coach Bob Mironowicz saying, 'Anyone who thinks they can kick, give it a shot.' I remember (coach) Jim Stitchman holding the ball for me. I kicked the ball farther than the midget kicker."

After three years of playing guard, tight end, defensive line and third-string quarterback – all in addition to kicking – it was time to leave Sun Youth. Manolopoulos headed to Vanier College and the Cheetahs football program.

"At CEGEP I played one game at guard," Manolopoulos said, "then the coach told me it might be better if I just kicked."

At the end of his midget playing days with head coach Earl de la Peralle and heading into CEGEP, Manolopoulos found that football had become very important in his life.

"I started to really like football," he said. "I liked it because it was very competitive and I realized that for whatever hard work you put into football, you got something out of it."

That appreciation of hard work is what has made Manolopoulos a success at the university level.

"He's done a great job to develop himself as an athlete," said Concordia head coach Pat Sheahan. "His work ethic has been equal to any other player. He's probably the best in the conference."

When he arrived at Concordia five years ago, Manolopoulos, 24, was a respectable kicker. In his second season with the Stingers, he was named the Ontario-Quebec Intercollegiate Football Conference (O-QIFC) all-star kicker. Punting, however, was a whole other story.

"He was not a punter when he arrived here," Sheahan said. "He worked very hard to develop his craft under the watchful eyes of coach (Gerry) McGrath. He worked hard to become the best punter in the O-QIFC."

Last season, he was named the conference's all-star punter.

McGrath, who spent six seasons kicking in the CFL, says Manolopoulos had the basics down when the two first started working together.

"He just needed some refining," McGrath said of his star pupil. "Mostly I helped him with his mental game and how to prepare and focus."

Manolopoulos has obviously been paying attention.

"I don't feel the pressure," he said. "Kicking is just something I like to do. I work hard enough not to feel pressure."

One thing that makes it easier to go out and kick is his faith in a couple of his teammates.

"It's not just me kicking," Manolopoulos said. "It's a whole unit. It's Johnny Petrella snapping, André Bolduc holding and I just swing my leg."

Coach Sheahan thinks Manolopoulos is going to swing his leg very successfully this season.

"Since last year he was the all-star punter, I think a realistic goal would be for him to be the leading punter/kicker in the nation," Sheahan said.

MARTIN BALLEUX - MAKING HIS MARK ON AND OFF THE ICE

Lest we forget, life does transcend sport, and Concordia Stinger left wing Martin Balleux illustrates this perfectly. For not only is he an exceptional hockey player, he is also an above-average student and a kind and generous human being.

It was through hockey and the Granby Bisons of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League that Balleux met David Bernier, a young mentally-challenged boy. David was one of the Bisons' greatest fans and his enthusiasm soon caught Balleux's attention. So he asked about the young fan and found out he was the son of a woman who worked for the Bisons. Before long they were spending time together, and Balleux took on a Big Brother-type role in David's life. He spent many hours with the young boy and even taught him to skate.

"Martin is an exceptional person," says Stingers head coach Yves Beaucage. "He is always willing to lend a hand to a teammate or anyone who needs help. He is calm, composed, serious and attentive to everyone around him.

His generosity and sense of reason make him a very well-respected young man."

Last winter, David and his mother came to Montreal and Concordia to see Balleux play with the Stingers. Balleux went out of his way to make the event a memorable one. David received many gifts from the Stingers and was even invited to centre ice before the game. He and Balleux dropped the puck at the opening faceoff.

"I was in a position to bring some light into his life," Balleux explained to a reporter when questioned about David. "All it takes is a couple of hours of my time and it means the world to him."

Balleux brings the same generous spirit to the Stingers. He makes his mark in many ways, not only on the scoresheet. He is a selfless player who is always willing to sacrifice himself for the team. A natural leader, he will someday be a Stinger captain.

He has been one of the top scorers on the Stingers each of the two years he has been at Concordia. If he hadn't injured his knee last fall, he surely would have been one of the top scorers in the country. He was on a pace of two points a game before the knee put him on the sidelines.

He recovered in late December and accompanied the Stingers on a six-game tour of the Czech and Slovak republics, where he gave his European counterparts a hockey lesson they won't soon forget. On the larger European ice surfaces, he was in his glory, scoring eight goals and adding five assists in the six games.

"He was one of the CIAU's most exciting players to watch," says Harry Zarins, Concordia's Director of Recreation and Athletics. "His excellent play, as well as his success in academic studies at Concordia and his tremendous community work play a major role in profiling Concordia hockey."

At the end of the university season, Balleux was invited to try out for the Quebec entry in the Maurice Richard Classic, which was held in Las Vegas in April. He made the team but had to pass up the opportunity to play in the international competition when he found out it conflicted with his exams.

School is very important to Balleux and the members of his family. His parents have always impressed upon him the importance of a good education. His mother, H  l  ne Balleux, has a degree in physical education from UQAM, while his father, Jean Balleux, has a degree in physical education from the University of Ottawa. Taking their lead, Balleux decided to come to Concordia to pursue his degree and to learn English. He only spoke French when he arrived at Concordia in September of 1993. He started out studying engineering and struggled a bit. He switched over to Decision Sciences, the Production/Operations Management Option, and has been a solid B student ever since, which is quite an achievement for someone who is studying in English for the first time.

MEN'S WRESTLING - CONCORDIA'S MYSTERY TEAM

BY JUSTIN KINGSLEY

The most successful sports program at Concordia University is also its most obscure.

Few members of the Concordia community are aware the wrestling team has won six national team championships at the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union (CIAU) level since the program's inaugural year in 1977 - the last national championship coming in 1990.

At the centre of the mystique that follows this team is head coach Victor Zilberman. He has been at the helm since the very beginning, 18 years, yet remains an unknown face to most Concordia students. Team members, upon graduation usually become assistant or part-time coaches and nary an outsider has held an important position within the team in the past 15 years.

The majority of Concordia's wrestlers are members of the Montreal Wrestling Club, also run by Zilberman. The athletes practise there and have been with the group for the better part of their careers.

"It's just not the same thing as other varsity sports," West Island and Concordia wrestler

Jason Della Rocca said. "It's not a sport you'd want to come to as a rookie in university. You'd probably have your face smashed to the ground in five seconds."

Only once a year, during October, does the team host an event. The Concordia Invitational Wrestling Tournament, held every year on the last weekend in October, attracts teams from all over Canada.

Aside from the Concordia Invitational, the team participates in a dozen other tournaments from October until February and travels all over eastern Canada. Most wrestlers are also affiliated with regional teams and usually compete in nation-wide and international events.

Few realize that Concordia wrestling alumni have won gold medals at both the Commonwealth and Pan-American Games.

The wrestling team's community profile is assuredly better than it is at home. More than 10 high schools, CEGEPs and wrestling clubs have been affiliated with the team thanks to clinics organized by Concordia coaches or team personnel.

Wrestlers to look out for nowadays are: David Wilson, who finished fourth in the heavyweight division at the national championships held in Calgary last February, and Della Rocca, who finished fifth at the CIAUs in the 82-kilogram division. Other members of the team include Serge Gattola, Mark Shalinski and newcomer Patrick Theriault.

Perhaps the best known of the bunch is Della Rocca, 21, who not only excels on the mats but also on the rugby field and in the classroom. The third-year accounting student was named Quebec's outstanding male student-athlete and fêted with nine other elite varsity athletes at a gala banquet in Toronto in October of 1994. The event was televised by TSN.

Della Rocca, a third-year accounting student from Pierrefonds, had a 4.21 grade-point average in the 1994-'95 school year and has earned Academic All-Canadian status again.

STUDENT-ATHLETE ACADEMIC SUPPORT PROGRAM

Who is CARL? And where can I find him?

What campus is this?

What's a prerequisite?

Where's the bookstore?

I lost my letter of acceptance. Where can I get another one?

This is just a sampling of the questions that have come Anna Johansson's way recently. Johansson co-ordinates Concordia University's Student-Athlete Academic Support Program (SAASP), which includes a drop-in centre where student-athletes can come on a regular basis or as needed to work on assignments. There is also a small reference library and Johansson is available to assist in locating tutors, accessing other university services and to discuss academic concerns and strategies. Of course, Johansson is also available to explain simple things like C.A.R.L. stands for Concordia Automated Response Line and it is the university's computerized registration system.

Most of these odd questions come from first-year student-athletes, which is why SAASP, now in its fourth year, is focusing much more of its resources on the newcomers this year.

"All the research has determined that the first term is the one that determines whether a student is going to make it," Johansson said. "This year, we will provide them with more orientation, information and supervision."

Counselling and Development will join the SAASP team this year. They will organize time management, stress management and study skills workshops.

"We are trying to encourage the student-athletes to develop attitudes that foster academic success," Johansson said. "We want to encourage them to be self-directed, pro-active and to network among themselves."

It's the newcomers and the out-of-towners who have the biggest adjustments to make.

When starting an education at a large English university like Concordia in a big city like Montreal the challenges and changes are enormous, especially if you are coming from Alma, Almonte or Ajax.

"It's not easy to leave home and have to look after yourself for the first time," Johansson said. "Some students are miles away from home and some are attending an English school for the first time."

But if they come to SAASP and Johansson for help, "They can find the support they need to successfully adjust and integrate into their new academic environment," she said.

There's a feeling that best describes the affinity most people have for their teams and their schools.

Call it team loyalty.

Call it school spirit.

Or call it, simply, pride.

Our company is in the business of helping teams display these feelings better than anyone.

CAMPUS RECREATION

The campus recreation program at Concordia University offers students, staff, alumni and the local community a wide variety of programs throughout the academic year (fall, winter, spring). Activities are offered at both the downtown and Loyola campuses.

SO WHAT DO WE HAVE TO OFFER?

Morning aerobics, lo impact, aerobic workout, hi/lo impact, medium impact, funk impact, body shaping, aerobic fitness, light impact, contemporary dance, classical ballet, ballroom dance, yoga, Tai Chi, Kung Fu, martial arts, women's self defence, triathlon club, fitness instruction, karate, hockey, broomball, ball hockey, volleyball, touch football, basketball and indoor soccer.

But which one to choose from? To make things easier, there are three open houses during the academic year. They take place Sept. 19 to 24, Jan. 16 to 21 and May 8 to 13. Students staff and faculty are welcome to try a class free of charge.

Keep in mind some activities fill up rather quickly, so you are encouraged to sign up as soon as you know which activity suits you.
